Not illustrated. 1840 Excerpt: .I have more to justify my act in refusing to have them search my house, which was all, my Lord, I ever denied; for I then declared myself willing that Mr. Sanders, the other constable (he being then at the next door), might charge whom he pleased, and search as narrowly as he could. L. C. B. said, Mr. Hawkins, can you prove what you have said? Hawk.--Yes, my Lord. Which particular shall I prove? L. C. B.-- Prove that about the ladder, if you can. Hawk.--I pray, my Lord, call John Acreman. He, being called, did fully justify what I said concerning their intended forcible entry, and added further, that he did help to set up the ladder for that purpose, being called by Sir John Croke s own sons, they and Larimore standing by all that time to watch. Hawk.--And touching the second particular, concerning the seizing of my goods, Mr. Sheriff himself can justify, that they had then in their hands such a writ: my Lord, he is in court, if your honour please to call him. And for the third particular, that I showed myself willing that Mr. Sanders should search, I can prove, my Lord, by these witnesses following, viz., Michael Read, gent., Mr. Thomas Sanders, Mr. Henry Golder, Robert Casemore, Mr. Charles Wilcox, and several others that were present. My Lord Chief Baron hearing these reasons fully proved, commended my discretion in not opening my doors; and he added further, that...
